

Played in Dulwich - Charting the heritage and future of an estate at play

Thursday 5 October 2017, 6.30-9pm, Dulwich College

Could Dulwich be unique? Author and historian Simon Inglis thinks so. In his most recent book for Historic England, Played in London - Charting the Heritage of a City at Play, Inglis maps the development of the 1,500 acres of Edward Alleyn's College of God's Gift and finds a concentration of sports grounds, and a range of sports quite possibly unmatched in urban Britain. In the heart of this remarkable sports scape is, of course, Dulwich College.

Prior to the main lecture, Daniel Norcross OA and inventor of 'Test Match Sofa' will talk about the future of cricket, especially at school and club level, the challenges it faces and the future of engagement.

In addition there will be an exhibition of the work of mouth artist Henry Fraser OA, as well as an opportunity to buy his memoir The Little Big Things.

Tickets £10, available from lectureseries@dulwich.org.uk

6.30 – 7pm Drinks reception in the James Caird Hall

.....
7 – 8.30pm Lecture in the George Farha Auditorium

The GE Moore Lecture Series:

In 2019 Dulwich College will celebrate its 400th anniversary. To mark this milestone the College has created a lecture series, each reflecting an aspect of the College's life and history. The series has been named after one of the College's most influential Old Alleynians. This is the ninth lecture in the series.

DULWICH COLLEGE
FOUNDED 1619

